HON. G. S. HARRINGTON, K.C.
Minister of Works and Mines in the Nova Scotia Legislature, who has introduced an amendment to the Coal Mines Regulations Act in the Legislative Assembly. The proposal calls for an eight-hour day for miners and an embargo upon the importation of mine-workers from outside the province.

"Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick"

All roads lead to Oyen on Easter Monday for the laughable three act comedy, which will be staged by the Young People's Club in Oyen Theatre, commencing at 8 p.m. All details of the play have been carefully worked out, and suitable staging arranged. No time or expense has been spared to ensure the success of the production, which promises to make a real hit, and it is hoped that the young people will be given enthusiastic support.

While the expense of producing the play justified a higher charge, the club decided that a popular price should be set so that everyone could attend. Tickets are now on sale at 50 cents each.

The plot is not a complicated one, but is well written, and the lines, which will keep the audience in roars of laughter, give the players unusual scope "to do their stuff". While we are in the "know" and could tell you a lot about the play, we are just going to advise you to see it for yourself. Don't let anything keep you away—and come prepared for two hours fun.

There will be a grand dance after the show, with five piece orchestra in attendance. Admission to dance 75 cents a couple, extra lady 25 cents.

Vitaglass Is Newest Idea
Does Not Exclude Ultra-Violet Rays
Like Window Glass

Scientists have discovered at date if somewhat belated, that glass windows, from the standpoint of health, are one of the greatest evils from which humanity suffers. They do not act as a preventive to cold winds, draughts and damp, but they only give the illusion of light and warmth. The Medical Research Council corroborates the fact that when light passes through a window of ordinary glass, it is entirely robbed of the beneficial ultra-violet rays. It gives a sensation of warmth, but, apart from this, it can have no effect on bodily efficiency and

Red Cross Havens

Warm Welcome for Immigrants in Seaport Nurseries

In Canadian ports, the stream of European immigration has already begun to pour this spring and the seaport nurseries in Saint John, Halifax and Quebec will soon be at the height of their unique work. Red Cross attendants are pleasant hosts down at the docks where all immigrant mothers and children are welcomed, by the official or voluntary attendants, given hot, hot food to eat and are made to feel instantly at home in Canada. In these nurseries the children may be left for hours while the parents attend to their bags and boxes, the nurses in charge take a friendly interest in their health and when the family finally takes train for distant destinations the interior there is sent forward to their points of destination an introductory card so that further relation to their new neighbourhoods is thereby established.

Last year the three nurseries looked after 17,345 children, and 11,525 women, supplied small medical aid or nursing treatments to 457 women or children and handed 8,410 follow-up cards to 15 different languages. The follow-up cards were forwarded to the Provincial Health Department, British Columbia, 491, Alberni, B.C.; Saskatchewan, 1,251; Manitoba, 1,206; Ontario, 3,325; Quebec, 467; New Brunswick, 65; Nova Scotia, 10; and Prince Edward Island, 15, and in all cases, the immigrant families were referred to a neighborhood interest before they reached their final destination. In the past six years the nurseries have cared for over 4,000 women and children, and that means export of the nurseries are all run under Miss V. A. Trevelyan, Red Cross, who with a corps of trained assistants and voluntary helpers belong to the Daughters of the Empire, the Junior Red Cross or other body, so that all needs are covered and all necessities met. The way of journey supplies provided to the incoming new Canadians. A practical English manual was recently compiled on her way by the nursery staff at Saint John, said with her eyes, "This is a lovely volume, and a great help to the story passage they had had, but it is reported that nothing excelled the Christmas Tree scenes which were distributed to crowds of children from Southern Russia by the Saint John Red Cross Juniors, who had "staged" the whole of the previous year in preparation for playing Santa Claus to the two hundred immigrant children and babies. The Juniors cut their own trees in the woods and set it up, decorated it, filled two hundred bags with candy and got together another two hundred other gifts. They were so enthusiastically pleased with the results of their labors and with the delight of the immigrants that they decided to make the Christmas Tree at the nursery, an annual event.

How to Become Popular

Practise Rare Art of Being an Interesting Listener

When you talk to a friend, hear what he is saying with your mind. Make the other fellow talk by asking him intelligent questions. When you meet strangers, end your interests by getting them to talk. Find out what other people like to talk about, and talk about that. Forget yourself and become interested in other people. People are more interesting than anything else in the world. When you argue, try to get at the truth and be glad to acknowledge that your friend has given you a new idea. Try these suggestions and see how popular you will become.

The Antiquity of Concrete

Professor Paul Abrams, the well-known American archaeologist, has recently drawn attention to the fact that concrete is older than the Christian Era. It is, indeed, one of the most ancient of the world's industries. The Romans were skilled in the use of concrete, and the dome of the Pantheon at Rome is of concrete. There is, too, a fresco at Thebes which shows the process of manufacturing concrete.

A Genuine Contribution

Isle of Man Gives Farther Assistance For War Debt

In making a debt settlement with the British government, that they speak in the Irish case, the Isle of Man, has shown that its shoulders are, metaphorically, broader than its expense is large. For, as Winston Churchill, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced, to the House of Commons, His Majesty's government will accept the Isle of Man's offer to undertake liability for a further £200,000 of war stock in settlement of its contribution toward the cost of the war. Though this sum may not be as large as money is often reckoned today, it can only be seen as representing a substantial amount when it is recalled that the total state revenue of the island is no more than about £250,000 a year, and that of this sum £10,000 is already paid over annually toward the expenses of the British government. It is to be noted, therefore, that Mr. Churchill stated before the House that he was glad to place on record his appreciation of this offer, which regards the sum of £200,000. As a voluntary contribution from a non-overseer community of Great Britain, fishermen and miners, this sum certainly represents a generous amount. —The Christian Science Monitor.

Islet on Paying Taxes

Siberian Tribe Offered Because Soviet Government Cancelled Levies

Work has reached Moscow that the tribe of Samoyeds living on the Arctic ice fields 1600 miles from the nearest village at Tobolsk, Siberia, are deeply distressed because the Soviet Government relieved them of all taxes. An epidemic had killed many of their reindeer and impoverished them to such an extent that they were unable to pay the taxes. The government had cancelled all tax levies to give them a chance to recover. "It is a sign of disrespect to us," a spokesman declared at a meeting of the Soviet of Samoyeds, said cheerfully. A resolution demanding that taxation of the tribe be resumed was overwhelmingly adopted. It developed that the Samoyeds were afraid that if the government did not tax them it would not care for them. At the recent Soviet elections, forty-three per cent of the eligible Samoyeds voted, families travelling long distances to the polls. The government decided to discharge their civic duties. Notices of the election had been sent to the tribe, the notices were on wooden poles and candles guaranteed not to be damaged by ice and water.

Great Clearance Sale Ends

British Government Completes Sale of Surplus War Material

One of the world's biggest "clearance sales" came to an end when the Disposal Board, which has handled the sale of all the surplus war stores left on hand since the end of the war, closed down recently. It has been an unending fiasco to the Exchequer, and as Chancellor has looked to it in vain. Anything from an old motor to a complete railway train or steamer has passed through its books, and the country has been the beneficiary by close on £700,000,000—enough to balance a pre-war budget for three and a half years. To find yourself with a few thousand cash bargains or even a small town for sale is rather a problem, but we are now sold out even of these items, and if it has disposed of our material, too, has the Disposal Board disposed of itself. For its one-time payroll of close on 50,000 has shrunk to just half-a-dozen.

A Footstep Parachute

A footstep parachute which came into operation automatically was tested at London Aerodrome recently in the presence of Sir Frank Bletcher, Director of Civil Aviation. Its operation was demonstrated by the inventor, Captain Fretz, of the Italian Air Force. In addition to opening automatically the parachute has the advantage of being easily detachable when the ground is safely reached.

He-What? Women overworked? Nonsense; think of the men.
She-What? You know the old saying, "Woman's work is never done."
He-That's the very reason she oughtn't to complain. Now, a man has to do his work or lose his job.

A Land Of Flowers

Canadians Spend Huge Sums Yearly Purchasing Flowers and Shrubs

To the mind of universal, Canada is usually a farm, a big wheat field surrounded by orchard and range, work of different by covered laborers. While this is chiefly true, there are signs that the big farm is putting a few covered fields and borders into the setting. The dooryard is becoming a garden. Over ninety-thousand rose trees were purchased last year from wholesale growers in the Dominion. Nine hundred thousand other ornamental trees and shrubs were bought and planted about the houses that are thus becoming beautiful homes. The home-makers bought half a million plants and nearly thousands of bulbs, and of the dozen varieties of cut flowers raised by florists, the flowering public took to fifteen million dollars, paying over a million and a quarter dollars for them.

These figures, from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, do not include imported plants and flowers, nor those raised by amateur gardeners, a vast category of flower-lovers.

The figures are simply those of the wholesale trade, which received over a million and a half dollars from the retailers and direct purchasers. There are hundreds of nurseries, many of them small. This was the first year of the inquiry, and the response must be very gratifying to those who delight in floral beauty, and who will judge from the figures that Canada proved the most efficient of farmers, now has the time and the inclination to plant flowers and trees about his home for ornament and comfort. —Vancouver Free Press.

Eskimos Are Workers

Will Prove Valuable Aid in Development of the North

Major L. W. Burwash, P.R.S.G., Ottawa, who has recently brought the Arctic Circle, said at a meeting in Winnipeg recently, that if the Eskimos were wiped out, the white men in the north would be set back at least 50 years. Major Burwash, a Dominion Government explorer, said: "To investigate the condition of Eskimos and report on the results of Canada's farthest edge of the mainland, he made a memorable trip along the Arctic coast, in 1925-26. He reported the conditions that the development of the vast territory in the North depended upon the natives. The Eskimos are essential to the major claims, as white men could not do the work, and the Eskimos, unlike the Indians, will work."

Conquering The Sahara Desert

Value of Proposed Air Service Cannot Be Estimated

To understand how valuable a trans-Saharan aerial transport line, operating between Algeria and the Niger river, would be to the French in the administration of their African possessions we have only to imagine what the same kind of service would have meant to western United States in the days when a part of it was known as the "Great American Desert." It is believed that the Sahara can be crossed by airplane on a regular schedule of 18 hours, reducing to two days a journey that by camel caravan requires weeks, besides eliminating the perils of the desert, sweeping extreme heat and the threat and putting no discipline on the traveller in the matter of his rations. The military expedition which made the first European crossing between Algeria and Nigeria, by way of central Sahara, started out in 1898 and did not reach its southern goal until November, 1899, a tedious march through a "chance of rocks and ravines." Shortly the tourist, at the same time, he looking down upon the vastness of the desert, his mind is filled with the thought that he will be complaining about the monotony of the scene.

Lions Chased By Storm

Animals Flee in Panic Before Late May Rival

The lion's reputation for courage is gone in Germany. One lone storm struck 14 lions to flee in panic at an enclosed circus. The kings of the beasts were chased by the wind and rain. The biggest of them, Menck, was growing dangerously at the trainer when he stalked the tame lion. Marchen, the stock dealer Menck's roars, and charged straight into the lion, who dropped all its dignity and ran, thirteen other lions following the flight in their nearby cages, with Marchen after them, wings spread and jabbering violently. The door of the cage was locked to protect the lion from the tame lion, who then pulled up a leg under the trainer and squawked his song of triumph.

Increase Span of Life

A human being may look forward to an average life of 70 years, in the opinion of Dr. J. James Richard MacLeod, Toronto, associated with Dr. F. E. Hastings, also of Toronto, prize winner for his discovery of insulin. "I don't think that the average life span has yet been 70 years," he said. "The human machine wears out just like a mechanical engine."

Only ten per cent of all known flowers have any appreciable scent.

Indians in North Starving

Left Without Food When Caribou Hunt Failed

Driven desperate by hunger, after travelling day after day along the coast, empty trails of the starved, emaciated natives of the north were seen by the Caribou hunters in a vain search for the caribou which dragged his sobbing. This is the story brought to Edmonton from the north by Harry Garfield, Fort Reesor. He was accompanied by J. A. Morie, another trader. Both were picturesquely clad in parkies, and said that there are no signs of winter loosening its grip on the northland yet.

Twenty-three Indians had died at the winter set in. The survivors are eating their meagre diet of muskoxen and strips of bannock used for repairing dog-harness and snowshoes.

Leonard told a terrible tale of privation and suffering which he staggered into the post of a small trader at the east end of Great Slave Lake, the survivors of this finished dog-team weary of the north, had been loaded with bales of white fox pelts.

Ideals Have Been Realized

Geill Rhodes Worked to Establish British Commonwealth of Nations

"So little done, so much to do." In a scathing critique at Maitland, South Africa, on March 26, twenty-five years ago, writes Francis J. McGowan, the New York Times, those words fell from the lips of the "Great Spirit of Africa," whose body is sealed in the granite fastness of the Maitland Hills. The terrible phrase he himself selected aptly described "View of the World." The nameplate on that lonely sepulchre bears the simple inscription: "Here lie the remains of Cecil John Rhodes."

Starting in life without place, fortune or health, he had built up the great amalgamated diamond interests of Kimberley, had added an empire to the British domain, and made himself virtually the master of South Africa. Before he was 30 years old he had begun his career in the Cape Colony. Before he was 40 he had become lord of one of the most powerful chartered companies in history and had served as Prime Minister of the Cape Colony and Governor of Rhodesia. He died before he was 50; died regretting that his work was unfinished.

"Everything in the world is too short," he once complained to Lord Rosebery. "Life and fame and achievement, everything is too short." In the realization of the brevity of human life, particularly his own, doomed as he was by a serious attack of malaria, he had taken the fatal pills that death should be the end.

Today Rhodes is pointed to as the supreme impetus—the advent of Imperialism in its worst sense, his desires declared—but in another sense he was the prophet of the present day interpretation of empire. His time may even go so far as to say that the Imperial Conference of last Fall, at which the component parts of the British Empire were discussed as a commonwealth of autonomous nations, was the realization of the Rhodes ideal.

Always Half Hour Ahead

Sundringham Time Is Observed by the Royal Household

Few people are aware that all the clocks at Sandringham are kept half an hour ahead of the time at throughout the year, so that the royal family only 50 per cent of summer hours. "Sandringham time" was begun, half in June, by King Edward VII, who loved to make the most of the daylight hours when the quiet life of an English country gentleman was his to be enjoyed.

It is supposed that on one occasion some of his guests, who had sat up late, were not ready bedtimes for the guns.

King Edward played a joke on the laggards by giving an order that all the clocks should be advanced half an hour on Greenwich time.

The measure taken was so completely interpreted that "Sandringham time" became established in the royal household long before sundown.

Queen Alexandra could not bear the idea of altering the arrangement in the years after the King's death, and as George continues his father's semi-joke.

The life of the Sandringham household, therefore, starts half an hour before that of the outside world.

Kept Clock Going

Repairs on the famous clock of St. Paul's Cathedral were effected while a man, seated in the complicated mechanism, operated the hands, so that visitors should not be misled by the timekeeper on which they had been accustomed to rely. For three hours he kept the clock ticking the old time, while the repairs in the street it appeared to be working normally.

Many modern words and figures of speech are based upon the disfigurement of food. The word "man" originally meant to gnaw or nibble; "fret" meant to gnaw or nibble; "treasure" meant to bite, and "scurvy" to strangle.

THE TRUE NORTH

Nowhere in Canada is the scenery more diversified than in that section of northern British Columbia, traversed by the Prince Rupert line of the Canadian National Railway, as along the inland sea, which lies between the mainland and the off-shore islands of British Columbia. There is something new and beautiful to see the whole of the distance, whether it is between Vancouver and Prince Rupert or Prince Rupert and Jasper. Photograph (1) shows a typical bit of the scenic belt. Boats are seen from the deck of an old-burning Canadian National Steamship. A look at the face of the Seafarer and his catch, as shown in No. 2 is sufficient evidence that the Stuart Lake, just north of Vanderhoof, the fishing is good. To the right of that is (No. 3) a picture of a grave in the picturesque Indian Graveyard at Hazelton. The bottom picture (No. 4) shows one of the cabins at Douglas Lodge, on Stuart Lake, one of the most up-to-date summer resorts in British Columbia.

THE ONLY MEDICINE BABY HAS HAD

Is What Thousands of Mothers
Say of Baby's Own Tablets

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. Experience teaches her that they are without an equal for relieving baby of any of the many little ailments which afflict him at one time or another. The Tablets never fail to be of benefit. They never do any harm as they are guaranteed to be from pure ingredients.

Concerning Baby's Own Tablets Mrs. Russell Hill, New York, Ont., says: "I shall always have a good word to say for Baby's Own Tablets. I have given them to our baby girl. In fact they are the only medicine she has ever had and I am proud to say that she took several pills at our baby shower. She is eleven months old and weighs 22 pounds. No mother whose child is provided with Baby's Own Tablets can make a mistake in giving Baby's Own Tablets."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Nerve Racking Occupation

Sailors on Submarines Have Physical Endurance Tested

Life in a submarine forms the subject matter of an article by M. N. McNeil in the Spectator. Those who have never made a voyage in a "U-boat" are not, he writes, what it feels like to go below the sea.

This question may be answered by saying that diving quickly in a submarine feels much like descending in a hot non-stop elevator from the top floor of a New York skyscraper. There is the same curious sensation of upward pressure on the sides of the feet during the descent, and, usually, a similar slight lift is noticed on reaching the bottom.

In calm water a submarine below the surface travels without rolling or pitching, and there is no vibration of any kind. She remains almost as quiet as when at anchor. In harbor only the hum of the motors and an occasional clank of the steering gear disturb the stillness. If the sea is rough, however, the ship rolls and the water surges at a depth of 20 feet and the water gurgles noisily in the ventilation pipes.

Contrary to popular belief, the atmosphere in a submarine keeps pure and fresh for at least 12 hours, owing to a constant supply of oxygen. If the boat stays down longer things feel sticky to touch and the air begins to get stale. Foul air rises into the control room, which becomes stuffy long before any real difficulty of breathing is experienced.

Every submarine has its own limit of depth. Generally speaking, below 100 feet the hull is liable to be crushed in an egg-shell by the external pressure of the sea.

Sounds are conveyed by water with startling clearness. Even at 20 feet below, the noise of a destroyer passing over the boat seems as loud as the rumbling of an express train in a railway tunnel.

It would be wrong to imagine that dangers are ever completely forgotten. With the exception of the fact that the whole ship's company are under a constant of suppressed excitement—a latent expectancy that something serious may happen at any time.

It is this continually keeping on the alert that strains the nerves and gives an severely the physical endurance of submarine sailors. Only specially selected men are capable of performing the arduous duties required. The submarine service is certainly not adapted for anyone afflicted with a nervous temperament or for people delicate on life.

Women To Enter Italian Air Service

Principally For Observation and Signal Posts Along Frontier

Women will be used in Italy's aeronautical service in the future, Signor Balbo, Under-Secretary of State for Aviation, told the Chamber of Deputies during a discussion of the aeronautical budget.

They will be used principally as the personnel of observation and signal posts along the frontier to guard against incursion of enemy aircraft.

By 1930, the under-Secretary said, Italy will have 2,577 airplanes, of which 565 will be bombers, 1,000 will be fighters and 600 others, with a yearly budget for aeronautics of $50,000,000.

New Type Airplane

Fashioned Like Gull

Aviator Constructs One Which Can Land in Smallest Possible Place

A new type airplane, designed to take off from "a field the size of a pocket handkerchief" and to land on the roofs of buildings, is ready for testing at New York.

Leonard W. Dornay, trained in 1910 by Orville Wright and one of the veteran pilots of the country, has completed the machine after two years' efforts. Tests he said, will prove whether he is "just another nut" or "10 years ahead of everybody else" as a designer.

The machine is fashioned after a sea gull. Many of the principles of bird flight, particularly those for making quick stops in alighting, were used in the new design.

As soon as the plane touches the ground the wings cease to support the machine and act with their full surface as air brakes to stop forward motion. A further application of this principle folds the wings back along the fuselage until the machine can be run into a hangar with a door 15 feet wide.

The elevators may be spread in flight as a blackbird "rattles" while on the wing. The wings and tail surfaces are of duralumin.

Romantic Haddon Hall, after being vacant for over 200 years, at last has been made habitable.

The Duke of Rutland, whose family has owned the famous mansion since 1660, has had the house restored to its original condition.

The Duke for eighteen months has been supervising repairs and alterations to make the mansion habitable.

Lesson: Matthew 16:13-14.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 21:1-8.

Explanations and Comments

1. Question.—About Jesus, verses 12, 14. With His disciples Jesus had journeyed as far as the neighborhood of Caesarea Philippi, where He suddenly asked them, "Who do men say that the Son of man is?"

The disciples answered that some thought He was John the Baptist, some that He was Elijah; and others, that there was no man then living like Him. "There was no man then living like Him," He said, "who would have said that the Son of man is the Son of the living God?"

The disciples answered that some thought He was John the Baptist, some that He was Elijah; and others, that there was no man then living like Him. "There was no man then living like Him," He said, "who would have said that the Son of man is the Son of the living God?"

The same innumerable carelessness prevailed at the picnic of the day before. Their fingers brushed lightly over gleaming threads, they begged a pardon for every level, which they took only those that startled flagrant. A pretty young woman—a very pretty young woman with small, angular face and smiling eyes of an early tandem, dropped to her knees. In her excitement, she had almost torn the already scant reach on her gown. "Pleese," she pleaded to the hand, "do not take my necklace. It is of small value. I have hidden diamonds that I will give you. My pocket is a relic of my life."

The evil fellow gave her his fingers and helped her to her feet. Then he bowed with a smile, and she felt like a white ribbon. "I would not disturb the girl that remains such a charming lady of something she should not forget," the hand said. Joanna, who was standing near, advanced quickly at the common vulgar fellow, whose hands were strong with garlic and whose hands were gross and awkward. Then she fell on the girl, and snatched a little.

The husband who appeared to be the leader of the robbery company, the one whose voice was restrained, grog, stepped into the middle of the floor and announced:

"We are most and to interfere with such plans as the men and women have made for their return to the more comfortable threshold of their homes here, but there are circumstances which may be avoided. It becomes a necessity to invite the gentlemen to remain while the hospitality of this lovely home, which we have borrowed for the evening. The ladies will be returned to the club house, where they may be as happy as to find other persons the merry dances of the evening night. You will be reunited with the music, doubtless. When the ladies are departed at the club house, we shall leave you. Moreover, the police will find us well dispersed by the time you gentlemen see your vehicles and find your way to the clubs here."

The men against the wall stirred and swore, but firearms brandished at the prospect of their doings of the night becoming widely reported to the police for the eyes of the men.

elated to remain and who, by that time, had made serious friends upon their last's state of champagne. The sense of the reception of those who had thought it necessary to leave the mind for a return to their place, however, by those who had not, was not, was that each one of the robbers' victims had, by the unexpected circumstances, become "one of us."

Joanna sat apart from the rhapsodic that immediately shaped itself. She made no pretense of restoring her mask to her face, for now all eyes were openly directed, even the mask that restrained the club house hostess had been dropped, and the revelry was unabated.

Outside, after an hour, the big drags, which had disappeared after dark, were the women still up about the parking yard and found a place to stand. This time Brandon, still muffled in his great coat, got out, leaving Joanna as he had come in the evening. He threw his coat back into the car, arranged his domino, took it without his face mask, went directly into the house. He saw Joanna alone at her isolated abode and went directly up to her.

CHAPTER XXXIII

The Test

When the dominoed figure bowed at her table Joanna looked up, curiously. She recognized the unmarked face she started. The relieved greeting she would have given someone close to her, who might provide a momentary distraction from the rest of such an evening adventure, trembled for an instant at her tongue. But something in Brandon's eyes checked the impulse.

The fear that she had never shaken off, crashed down upon her in a moment. The unknown, comfortable face that came to her when he first touched her fingers at the club house from Ecstasy in the bank when he had been her first check against her mysterious money.

"You here!" she breathed. "I didn't know—have you been?"

"I have," he said, "and I have seen words said but I haven't said them. I am happy to find you alone."

Joanna knew, from his tone and his manner, that a climax perked. A climax of some sort; something associated with the night, with her, with whatever Brandon had been in his relationship to her since that day in the bank.

On the dance floor, and at the tables near, the saw men and women looking at them curiously; at her, the Golden Girl whom everyone recognized and for whom many eyes had been raised when she came in with the belated group that had been ordered back to the club house by the brigands. Looking at her and then at Brandon whom they also knew. Her chin went up a little, and she heard her own breath.

"I am alone only by chance," she said. "I was here, with Kent, when he left."

"I know," he broke in. "Some mountain bandits have taken charge of him and returned you here—as at that evening, my dear, when you relaxed into your choice a society and a surrounding that are, to say the least, daring."

"That, of course, is what places you to know. Why have you come? I feel that you are here because of me."

"Am," he said, shortly. "I am here to tell you, at last, that the play is over. As you have put your mask aside for the rest of the night, so my interesting little masquerade must be dropped. You came up here, I imagine, to color an answer. Instead you are silent to discover what you are made of."

She sank back into her chair. Her face blanched. Her brain reeled with the knowledge that an animal that in some mysterious fashion it has been caught in a trap. Before he spoke again she laughed, a short, nasal laugh, as if she were amazed by the coolness of her feeling, the utterly ridiculous situation.

The hand clutched abruptly and she watched the man who still stood looking down at her unseeing, ungracious, uncomprehending.

"I have a great deal to say to you," Brandon declared. He paused a moment, and then continued:

"There is a room—a small supper room, just off the balcony. If you do not object, may we talk in that room?"

She got to her feet silently, and when he had bowed his acknowledgment of her assent, walked with him to the dining alcove that led to the mezzanine. At the door of the private banquet room he stood aside as she might enter ahead of him. A waiter met him at the door.

"We shall not be served," Brandon said to the man, "but as I shall leave the door open, perhaps you will stay near the door, so as to be able to tell me if anyone enters the balcony."

Joanna faced him when he stepped across the hall and she saw

Most Powerful Fleet In Baltic

Germany is Rapidly Increasing Power of Her Navy

"One hundred per cent efficient" is the watchword of the new German navy, which is now being steadily developed in strength.

The estimates for 1927 show that even attention is paid to improvement in fighting equipment and naval engineering. They further reveal the comparatively large program of new construction now under way.

There is voted for constructing on four new cruisers of the Emden class (the names of which were completed last year, and is now making a maiden trip around the world).

Two big destroyers and one torpedo boat.

There is a large increase in the use of oil fuel, which is now used exclusively in all new ships, as well as in the older destroyers recently completed.

The fact that elaborate experiments are being made to perfect the Diesel engine for high-speed warships is a result of the first time.

Germany may yet produce the first high-speed submarine or battleship.

The best use in active service consists of four battleships and five cruisers, with torpedo craft and smaller vessels. It is now proposed to construct more big ships, and to substitute of civilians for sailors in all shore appointments has been made by many more officers and men for sea duty.

Race Determined By Hair

Also Shows Sex and Probable Age Scientists Are Told

Human hair belongs to race, nation, class, sex and probably age, the American Anthropological Association has been told.

The Central United States was informed at an annual meeting in Chicago by M. R. Bernstein, of New York City.

Dr. Bernstein said that the study of the hair, which has been conducted by experts with half of all colors and textures.

All Indians' hair, for instance, has different weight than an Italian's, and an old Irishman's hair, Dr. Bernstein said, would show a definite difference from a young Irishman's hair.

This discovery has considerable importance to the study of physical anthropology, Mr. Bernstein said, inasmuch as researchers may now have hair to work upon as well as skulls in making anthropological determinations.

Working on "Silent" Planes

France Perfecting Machines That Cannot Be Heard

Silent aeroplanes, pointed the color of night, which can neither be heard or seen after dark, will soon be a practical accomplishment of the French Aviation Service. It is reliably stated.

Several other nations have been working along the same lines, but have not yet succeeded. Recent French experiments with new non-diesel engines have demonstrated that the "plane equipped with them could be heard at a distance of 200 feet from the ground. Within a short time, absolutely silent, "planes will be a feature of the French Aviation Service, according to the same reports."

The laboratory has also been working for many months on the question of the color of "planes and the experts have decided upon a new dark paint which has the effect of so successfully blending the "plane into the night atmosphere as to make it invisible even within a few hundred feet of the landing field.

With this so-called "disappearing" paint and other engines, the desired qualities of the aeroplane will be increased enormously. In the opinion of aeronautical experts, "They cite as an example a night attack by several hundred armored planes, including bombers, upon a enemy city or position."

The enemy anti-aircraft defenses would be immediately placed at a disadvantage, for about the only means of detection left would be searchlights.

During the World War the peculiar approach of aeroplanes which, to many people seemed to say the words "I will" acted as a sufficient warning to prevent the French defending forces from taking action.

Little Helps For This Week

Then that have faithful over a few things, I will make them ruler over the city of the Lord—Matthew xxv: 14.

O Ye that faint and die, arise and live!

Change to that all things have a place to bless; if he is faithful who has sworn to slay.

Then be ye also faithful to possess!—Anna Lucinda Warner.

I will not rest On aught but being faithful.—George Ethel.

The essential difference of the heart is the same, whether it is exercised in two miles or it is a vagrant treasury; the difference of the heart is equally beautiful, whether it is displayed in governing an empire or in serving a creature. Observe the striking fact that our Lord does not say, "The heart is faithful in that which is least will be faithful also in much," but "The heart is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

—Frederic W. Farrar.

Fly Five Miles a Minute

Speed of New Military Seaplane Built For Great Britain

It will be possible to reach Brighton from London in ten minutes on the new military seaplane Napier & Gloster seaplane, which they were built to represent Great Britain in the Schneider Cup race at Vienna in September. Each, it is anticipated, will be capable of a speed of five miles a minute. These racing machines, which have been fitted with "Bing" boilers, are fitted with secret engines of enormous power, but the weight reduced to an absolute minimum.

Delayed Punishment An opinion was expressed by the Canadian Prisoners' Association recently when a whipping sentence has been imposed upon a prisoner, that he should be carried out immediately the prisoner enters the jail. The association claims that to keep a prisoner in suspense, awaiting a flogging over a long period, is an unnecessary act of cruelty. While all the members of the association were not in favor of corporal punishment, they were united on the foregoing.

Catapult Aeroplanes

Have Been Successfully Launched From Deck of Ships

To save time, it is suggested that ships be equipped with catapults to launch aeroplanes laden with specially weighted mail and parcels, or, in exceptional cases, even passengers. It has already been proved that aeroplanes can be launched from the confined decks of ships by the catapult system.

It has been shown that aeroplanes with no human beings on board can be launched on to objects of great value, and it is expected that this range will shortly be increased to one hundred miles.

Tree Planting

The importance of transplanting trees as early in the spring as frost will permit cannot be over estimated. Many trees are lost by late spring planting. The latest possible date for transplanting depends on the variety as some come into leaf much earlier than others. The earlier the transplanting is done the better, but after the leaf buds have begun to open there is danger of losing the tree entirely by transplanting.

In transplanting deciduous trees it is usually necessary to cut some branches out or cut the entire top back to make a proper balance between roots and leaves. A very important point is to pack the soil very firmly about the roots.

Of all the poplars tried at the Scott Experimental Station the Russian Poplar is the most satisfactory. Among the 30 varieties of Willows tested the Laurel Leaf and Golden Willows have given best results but the climate is rather dry for best results with willows.

Of the flowering shrubs the bush honeysuckle is undoubtedly one of the hardiest and most satisfactory. It is covered with blossom in the spring and an ornamental berry is formed which remains for months.

A number of different hedges have been tested and the common caragana (Caragana Arborea) is recommended for practically all conditions. It is widely used for shelter for gardens and is very efficient as a windbreak or snow trap.

Caragana is readily grown from seed and a very dense ornamental hedge may be formed if trimming is done regularly from the beginning. If allowed to grow without trimming, it will attain a height of 12 or 15 feet, but will not be so dense.
